

LL.M. International Business Law

— UNITED ARAB EMIRATES —

The LL.M. International Business Law program focuses on practical case studies and key topics, with a multidisciplinary orientation. It prepares students and professionals for operations such as major acquisitions or market transactions, cross-border mergers, complex financing, restructurings, LBOs, financial engineering and industrial projects. These complex operations often lead to the search for innovative solutions. It is particularly relevant to study them and analyze the legal, financial and accounting issues they raise. Thus, contracts, guarantees, financing and international trade litigation, among other fundamental subjects, are examined from different angles.

Dual Expertise

50% of the lecturers are professors and 50% are local law practitioners

Hanan Ahmad

Chief Strategy & Corporate Affairs Officer,
Du Telecom

"As a Company Secretary and a governance professional of one of the largest listed public companies in the UAE, I have found this course to be beneficial and believe it would further help me succeed in my role. Having a legal background will allow me to support my Board and ensuring that the company complies with regulatory standards in an increasingly regulated world- it goes without saying that this is no mean feat. What has also attracted me to joining the program is the exceptional approach of teaching law not only in the views and experienced from different disciplinary traditions and jurisdictions but also the current practice in the UAE. It will surely open one's mind and lead globally."

Deepa Carbon

CEO - Strategy and Future Insights at Dubai
Economy and Tourism Exec. Vice President

"This 'first-of-its-kind' collaboration between the University of Paris II and DIFC to bring the LL.M curriculum to the UAE has been an exemplary demonstration of academia and legislation coming together with practical business in a global context. At a personal level, the opportunity to be part of the inaugural cohort has been a truly memorable experience, enriched by the diversity of the class and the engagement of the faculty. As an expatriate woman in an executive leadership role across two tourism and business entities in Dubai, the exposure provided by this LL.M programme has been exceptionally rewarding. From tackling advancements in international legislations, to practical implications of cross-border regulations across corporate and government, the curriculum was not only well rounded, but also effectively adapted to cater for a dynamically evolving business ecosystem. I trust that this is the start of a long legacy for the school with our country, and a benchmark for academia that will lead the future of education beyond the legal field."

HE Abdulla Al-Nuaimi

Assistant Undersecretary at Ministry of Human Resources and Emiratisation

"Graduating from Paris-Panthéon-Assas University is a distinct privilege and opportunity. I was honoured to have been part of this program, where I gained knowledge, and developed my skills, in addition to building a network of professional relationships with my colleagues. It has been an exceptional journey."
